FRIDAY, AUGUST 3

Reclaiming Our Story: The Life of Henrietta Lacks Movie & Conversation on Health Equity with the Lacks Family

African-American women are often diagnosed with aggressive breast cancers, younger, at later stages, and when the prognosis is poor, leading to a nearly 40% higher death rate than white women. On August 3, 2018, Susan G. Komen will partner with the National Black Nurses Association to honor Henrietta Lacks on her 98th birthday by hosting an art exhibit, movie screening and conversations (snacks will be provided) in reflection of her contributions to the world via research involving her "HeLa cells," which ultimately led to the discovery and advances in precision medicine, lifesaving cancer treatments and cures for diseases. Together, we will explore the importance of access to scientific advances, family health history, patient advocacy and how nurses can help their communities achieve breast health equity.
